THE CITY UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK

Appointment of David Joselit as Distinguished Professor at The Graduate Center

RESOLVED, That the Board of Trustees of The City University of New York appoint Dr. David Joselit as Distinguished Professor of Art History at The Graduate Center, effective February 1, 2014, with compensation of $28,594 per annum in addition to his regular academic salary, subject to financial ability.

EXPLANATION: Professor Joselit comes to CUNY from Yale University’s Department of Art History, where he is currently a Carnegie Professor. He is an internationally renowned scholar recognized for his mastery of both contemporary and modern art history and criticism.

Professor Joselit earned both his undergraduate degree and a doctorate in Fine Arts from Harvard University. He is also an alumnus of the Program in History, Theory, and Criticism of Art and Architecture at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Prior to graduate school, Professor Joselit served as Curator at the Institute of Contemporary Art in Boston. He is the author of four books: After Art (Princeton University Press, 2013); Feedback: Television Against Democracy (MIT Press, 2007); American Art Since 1945 (Thames and Hudson, 2003); and Infinite Regress: Marcel Duchamp, 1910-1941 (MIT Press, 1998), and many edited books.

The Graduate Center and The City University of New York will be well-served by Professor Joselit’s appointment as Distinguished Professor.
