A. VIDEOTAPING OF BOARD MEETING: Chairwoman Paolucci announced that in addition to videotaping tonight's meeting, it is also being transmitted live on cable, Channel 75. This is an important community service and will help provide the public with additional opportunities to observe the work of the University. I am grateful to the staff and to CUNY-TV for their assistance in this.

B. GENERAL RULES FOR BOARD MEETINGS: Chairwoman Paolucci announced that individuals in the audience are asked not to speak out or otherwise interfere with the proceedings of the meetings of the Board of Trustees. Any individual who does so, may be removed from the room and subject to arrest.

C. BOARD OF TRUSTEES' BOROUGH HEARINGS: Chairwoman Paolucci announced that The Bronx Borough Hearing would take place on Tuesday, May 11th from 5:00 to 8:00 P.M., in the Rotunda of The Bronx County Courthouse. These borough hearings are important events that provide the Trustees with the opportunity to hear from CUNY's constituents and communities in each of the five boroughs.

At this point, Vice Chairman Badillo and Trustee Stone joined the meeting.

D. INTRODUCTION OF PULITZER PRIZE WINNERS: Chairwoman Paolucci stated that her first announcement is a very pleasant one and she is delighted to be able to make it. We have with us today the two 1999 Pulitzer Prize winners for history for their superb book "Gotham: A History of New York City to 1898". I've gone through it, but I haven't read all of this awesome but very readable really fabulous enterprise, and I want to congratulate the authors who are Professor Edwin Burrows of Brooklyn College and Professor Mike Wallace of John Jay College.

The project has been in the making, I understand for 20 years. It really is an extraordinary book, because of course it should be used as a reference, but it is a really, I think, an historical document of great value and it reads very well. I went through it and just picked up the things that interested me. You can almost use it as a reading to your children or grandchildren, picking out the topic that they might like to hear about in reading that portion of it. It really is a wonderful book and I’d like the authors to stand and take a bow.

Statement of Professor Edwin Burrows:
Thank you very much. That was very gracious and Mike and I are very appreciative. I'm going to make just a couple of comments and you'll see that I am the briefer of the two of this act. It's always a little alarming to have the professorate address you because we do talk at great length. Every year around this time, the Brooklyn College Library hosts a reception for faculty offers. It's a nice opportunity to nibble sandwiches and chat with colleagues. Last week's gathering was the first time I had in many years, 20 some years probably, considering the amount of time we spent on this book. There was a lot of excitement as you can imagine, that a member of the faculty had won a Pulitzer Prize. What struck me however, was how many people were there. There was a room full of men and women who had written books on art, music, poetry, philosophy, political science, sociology, and physics. Indeed, there are probably few colleges in the country I dare say, where the annual crop of faculty authors would produce so numerous a throng and I was very proud to be among that throng.

I mention this to you today because Mike and I have received a Pulitzer Prize and we think of this as an opportunity to remind ourselves that The City University of New York remains a much better and a much stronger institution than it has often of late been represented to be. This is also, and should be, the occasion to remind ourselves that great universities like CUNY do not remain great by recrimination and meanness and exclusion. They become - and they remain - great by their devotion to the life of learning, and by their willingness to open their doors to all who would come in search of knowledge. As much as I am grateful that Gotham, this very heavy tome, has won a Pulitzer Prize, I am also very proud to be a member of this still distinguished institution. Thank you very much.

Statement of Professor Mike Wallace:
We've had many, many appealing moments since winning a prize that is so unquestionably regarded, around the world, as a measure of excellence. But one of the best has been recognizing, with great satisfaction, the correlation that exists between the prize-founder's project, and that of the institution that Ted and I and all of you, are so intimately involved with, The City University of New York.
Back in 1883, immediately on assuming control of the New York World, Joseph Pulitzer called his inherited, dignified staff together and announced: "Gentlemen, you realize that a change has taken place in the World. Heretofore you have all been living in the parlor and taking baths every day. Now I wish you to understand that, in the future, you are all walking down the Bowery."

This was an unnerving prospect. The Bowery in those days, was the center of the City’s Irish and German and Jewish working class quarters – and it prompted several on-the-spot resignations. Sure enough, soon the paper was vigorously, and with fantastic success, appealing to a mass audience. The World began chronicling the lives of ordinary people, using human-interest stories to spotlight and dignify members of the metropolitan crowd. Pulitzer’s reporters now routinely quoted the kind of New Yorker who had rarely appeared in print before, filling his pages with the thoughts and doings of hotel clerks, artists, cooks and cops, as well as portraits of judges, politicians and financiers.

To reach these folks, the World adopted a breezy and colloquial style. "Condense, condense!" Pulitzer commanded his reporters, following ad men and opting for the simple nouns, vivid verbs, and short sentences that made the paper accessible to immigrants learning the language. I admit it takes some chutzpa for someone who’s co-committed a 1400 page book to even whisper the word 'condense', but you should have seen the earlier drafts! When chastised by E.L. Godkin of the Evening Post for breaking with the genteel conventions, Pulitzer replied: "I want to talk to a nation, not a select committee."

I came to CUNY in 1971 – my only other job negotiation that year was with Harvard University – precisely because I was attracted by it’s commitment (metaphorically speaking) to “walking down the Bowery.” I found it inspiring that CUNY had dedicated itself to achieving not only excellence but access as well. Lots of places I reasoned, could have provided me with excellent students. Harvard, or my alma mater Columbia, guaranteed this by imposing extremely high admission standards, and extremely high tuitions to boot. But I believed that the result would have been a far more restricted student body – much narrower in class, race, and ethnic composition – and that this would have made for a far less challenging teaching experience than CUNY.

I was right. My students at John Jay have been and continue to be terrific students. They’re ambitious, hungry for education. They want desperately to be in college – unlike many Columbia students, most certainly including myself, who went and go to college, as a matter of course. Jay students not only work hard, they work against the odds – overcoming the obstacles of having regular full time jobs, difficult domestic lives, and limited funds. One of the most astonishing things that I’ve heard in the recent debates about CUNY has been the complaint that students don’t finish up in four years. Why on earth should this four-year model apply, especially at a moment when it’s becoming obsolete, as we realize that education must be a lifelong learning process, geared to adults as well as adolescents. CUNY is on the cutting edge here, and we should be proud of it.

CUNY students are also excellent. Despite the handicaps of coming out of the City school system, they win prizes of their own, rack up CEO-ships, and serve the City in innumerable positions of responsibility. In some degree, I think, this is precisely because CUNY students are such a variegated lot. Their diversity is not only a matter of class and condition – my classes range from police precinct commanders to the much-derided welfare mothers – but also of ethnicity. I began my History of New York City course each semester with an in-class survey, asking students who in their families first came to New York and why they came. And virtually every semester the class turns out to include descendants of Indians, Dutch, Africans, English, Irish, Italians, Poles, Russians, Greeks, Jamaicans, Dominicans, Chinese, Filipinos, Salvadorans, and on and on. “If you want to understand the most basic fact about New York City,” I tell them, “look at yourselves and look at this classroom. There are very few places on earth where such a constellation of the peoples of the globe will be gathered together on a random basis in a single classroom.”

I know that Ted feels the same way. More to the point there are many, many faculty members who feel like Ted and I do, who came to CUNY because it combined excellence with access. This is one reason our faculty is so outstanding, that there are so many other prize winners on our campuses, and that there will be so many more in the years to come.
Nevertheless, I am deeply concerned about our institution's future. I'm working on Volume II of Gotham now, and it often makes for a disturbing split-screen life. At one moment, I'm seated at my computer, writing about the glorious City being erected early in the 20th Century — building its colossal infrastructure of roads, rails, sewers, and water mains. In the next moment, however, I might hear on my radio that one of the hundred-year-old water mains in my neighborhood has just exploded, or that a piece of a bridge has crumbled.

I worry that CUNY might yet fit into this pattern. That at one moment, I'll be at my computer writing about its glory days — which are not, in my judgment, simply the 1930's at The City College, but even more so that extraordinary moment in the 1970's when we as a City, embarked on an effort to make Thomas Jefferson's vision of a Republic of Letters a reality, when we decided to offer higher education to all our citizens. What worries me is that at the next moment, I might be hearing that CUNY, this pillar of our City's social infrastructure, has crumbled as well. Not because it has failed in its mission, but because we failed to stay the course and fulfill our commitment to excellence with access.

CUNY is by no means a perfect institution. But if a knife gets dull in spots, we don't break the blade, we sharpen it. I think that trying to improve institutional excellence by baring access — turning tests meant to assist students into barriers to their entrance — will have a disastrous impact. I hope we can work together to devise better ways to achieve our mutually agreed upon goals. When I get around to writing the history of this City in the 1990's, I don't want to have to include an obituary for CUNY in my pages, I want to celebrate its continued existence as a place that will produce the Pulitzerians of tomorrow. Thank you.

Interim Chancellor Kimmich stated that this is really a wonderful moment. We've just heard from marvelous committed teachers, great scholars, and obviously citizens of the University. We are truly excited about their recognition, and that the Pulitzer Prize extends to two of our faculty colleagues. I join the Board and everyone here in congratulating them. As it happens, while I was still at Brooklyn in one of my former lives, I got to know something of this project while it was in the making and I am, therefore, especially pleased to see the result. The Pulitzer Prize for Ted Burrows and Mike Wallace is part of a rich tradition at the University. We recall other faculty members and alumni who were selected for this award. But never before have we had two current members of the faculty, much sought after teachers, active in the classroom and on their respective campuses, engaged in scholarly collaboration on a beautifully conceived, splendidly written work, so honored. In the largest sense these national honors, whether they go to faculty or students or programs, confirm for us the high quality of our University and its ability to stand tall among its peers across the country. This is indeed a proud day for all of us. So thank you Ted, thank you Mike.

M. ORAL REPORT OF THE INTERIM CHANCELLOR: Interim Chancellor Kimmich reported the following:

1. Let me start with the State budget. I think we all know here, there is more stasis than movement. I think you all know that the Governor, the Assembly, and the Senate are still very far apart on revenue projections for the coming fiscal year with no likely resolution in sight at this point. Stalemate notwithstanding, we are maintaining a very active presence in Albany in staying in touch with all the parties. The visits by representatives from the colleges and the chancellory continue regularly. Vice Chancellor Mirrer was there last week. Interim Deputy Chancellor Hassett was there last week and is there again today. We are also working with our colleagues from SUNY, especially on community college issues, where of course, their weight carries a great deal of importance. So our efforts continue and contain unabated.

2. You will also know that the Mayor released the City budget last week. A preliminary analysis of that budget is among the papers before you. Regarding the numbers, there is no change from the financial plan the Mayor released in January – no funds for College Now, no funds for the Merit Scholarship Program the City Council initiated last year, and no provision for mandatory costs. There are however, two stipulations the City has set as conditions for the release of City funds to the University: first, that CUNY use an objective test, based on high national standards, to determine when students in remediation are ready for college level work; and second, that CUNY offer students in remediation the option of obtaining remediation at other educational institutions through a voucher system.

As to the first, the University has made significant progress in this area as a result of several Board policies over the last year and a half, and yet another applicable policy on the agenda today. When it comes to testing, it's imperative that we comply with the national standards prescribed for high stakes assessments and I think we have discussed this at some length. As to the second condition, it raises complex issues that need to be looked at and examined carefully. Not least of course in the context that we know and what research shows of the effectiveness of remedial programs.

3. The City Council released its preliminary budget in response to the Mayor's financial plan, late last month. It provides for merit scholarships for our students, proposes a College Now program, expanded to every high school in the City and including the senior colleges, beginning with those which offer both associate and baccalaureate programs, and responds to University needs for various collaborative and other programs. It also provides for a police cadet program, for students enrolled in the City's public colleges, who have completed 60 credits.

What are the next steps? Now that the Mayor has released the budget, the City Council will have its hearings on that budget which is scheduled for adoption on the 5th of June. So six weeks from now, the Mayor's budget will be final. Between now and then, we will be in touch with both the Mayor's office and the City Council on the financial part of the budget as well as on the state of conditions, consistent of course, with the terms of the University's budget request, which was adopted last fall.

4. I reported to you last month on where we stand on admissions for this fall. The news continues to be positive. We have now completed the fifth phase of a process that runs to August of admitting and allocating students for the fall semester. As of mid-April the University admitted some 32,700 freshmen overall, which represents a slight increase from this time last year. In percentage terms what we see is an increase in admissions of .8% for the senior colleges and 3.3% at the community colleges. The data on transfer students are more difficult to compare as a consequence of a slight change in the calendar. Allocations this year are two weeks later than last year. We show an overall increase of 18.8%, fairly evenly distributed across the colleges. But bearing in mind the difference in the calendar, I would say that we are running about even with last year in the allocations. As soon as we have better dates to compare I will give you a more thorough analysis.

Let me just make three interesting points about these figures. First of all, the figures reflect the impact of tighter admissions standards at the senior colleges. Demand has not dropped. In fact, applicants requesting admission to senior colleges with baccalaureate programs only are up somewhat. But since not all the applicants meet admissions standards set by these colleges, admissions themselves are slightly down. You see the difference. Second, we notice that the applicant pool, from high average students continues to be strong. We have an increase in applicants with high school grade point averages of 85 and above, an increase of close to 5%. The challenge as I've said here and on other occasions, is to make sure that these applicants enroll at the University. These are students who've got other options and we are going to have to make sure that The City University remains at the top of their list. Third, an interesting phenomenon, applications from the suburbs, Westchester, Long Island, are up by over 30%. This cohort too, will be difficult to enroll for the same reason I just mentioned, but clearly the University is attractive to college-bound students beyond the five boroughs. That's an interesting development. Now that said, let me remind us all that this relates to applications and admissions, not to enrollments. We will continue to get applications and to admit students through August and we will not know about actual enrollments until the fall semester is on the way.

5. About two weeks ago I sent the Trustees a report on the performance of CUNY students who took the teacher certification exams in 1997/98. The data, which came from the State Education Department and is broken down by colleges, consists of two sets. One shows the scores of all those who took the exam and identify themselves as affiliated with a CUNY college. The other shows the scores of all those whom the colleges had recommended for certification and that means that they had completed all the requirements of a teacher education program. That's a significant difference. The former number is inevitably going to be larger than the latter, but the latter is the number that matters and what we stand behind. What I want to draw your attention to is first, the fact that the reforms put in place at the campuses, under the Board's leadership and with the exemplary work really of the presidents and their faculty, are beginning to produce results. That doesn't mean that we are there as much remains to be done. For example, passing standards on the certification exams will become progressively more rigorous over the next three years and we are going to have to put a lot more work and effort into making it work. But these initial results going back now, a year and a half, are heartening at least and certainly encouraging. Second, the disparity between the two sets of numbers is an interesting measure of overall program performance and expectation. The gap has begun and should continue to close as enhanced admissions criteria and other strength and student performance requirements are phased in at the different colleges. We will be watching those patterns and we are prepared to discuss these results and further implications in more detail at the Academic Affairs Committee meeting next month.

We should note that the improvements we see in our programs connect well not only with the emphasis that the Carnegie Foundation and other such groups are putting on the training of teachers for the future, so that we are really part of a larger mainstream effort in this regard. They connect also with progress we have made in securing outside funding to attract the best students into teaching careers through the Teacher Opportunity Program, thanks to the efforts of Vice Chancellor Mirrer and her office, and other colleagues in the chancellory and that is showing some very good results.

6. With regard to the master plan update that the University will submit to the Regents this summer, the Trustees heard from me on this subject back in February when I distributed copies of correspondence with Commissioner Mills to them and to the college presidents.

Under the terms of the State Education Law, the University is obliged to submit such an update every four years. This is an opportunity to report on developments of the previous four years and to indicate what is already the case or is contemplated in light of existing Board policies and plans. The due date for the next update is the year 2000. We've consulted with the State Education Department and have begun the process of preparing an update for submission this summer, so as to meet the timetable set by the Board for the implementation of the remediation resolution adopted in January. The update will include the implementation plans the colleges will turn in next month and cast them in the broader context of the changes introduced by the Trustee resolutions of summer 1995 and extended since.

The draft that we are working on will cover these changes and other issues related to enrollment, operating and capital budgets, faculty, faculty research, the University role in economic development, and more such. We will be in touch with Trustees throughout this process and we'll submit the draft for review and approval to the appropriate Board committee and to the Board as a whole. We'll also present it at a public hearing and we will be in touch with the campuses throughout, before the document is due on July 1st.

7. Last month I mentioned the CUNY Jobs Fair, an annual event which will be held at the Javits Center, this coming Friday. Over 120 firms and agencies have signed up to offer employment opportunities, an unprecedented number. We've never had that many before. Among the newcomers are, American Express, Equitable, IBM, J. Walter Thompson, and Burson Marstella, just to mention a few and they will be joining equally well known corporate employers who have been with us for many years. We should not be surprised. Our graduates after all, have established a reputation for CUNY and their successors who will be lining up to meet with prospective employers at the Job Fair on Friday, will extend that reputation. If Trustees or presidents wish to join us at breakfast with the corporate employers at 9:30 Friday morning at the Javits Center, you will be more than welcome. That concludes my report.

NO. 5. COMMITTEE ON ACADEMIC POLICY, PROGRAM, AND RESEARCH: RESOLVED, That the following items be approved:

WHEREAS, The New York State Board of Regents has enacted new high school graduation requirements that incorporate enhanced Regents examinations in English and mathematics that will be phased in over the next two years; and

WHEREAS, Student performance data available from the University Applications Processing Center enables the University to develop a correlation between Regents scores, SATs and performance on the Freshman Skills Assessment Tests; therefore be it

B. THE CITY COLLEGE - B.F.A. IN ELECTRONIC DESIGN AND MULTIMEDIA:

RESOLVED, That the program in Electronic Design and Multimedia leading to the Bachelor of Fine Arts degree to be offered at The City College be approved, effective September, 1999, subject to financial ability.

EXPLANATION: The City College has, since 1983, offered a BA program in Art with a specialization in Graphic Design. Over the years, with the introduction of new technologies and in order to keep pace with industry demand, this specialization has rapidly expanded and evolved to move from a focus on design and illustration for publishing to incorporate the present far broader range of practice in design and illustration for screen and for time-based media. This convergence has made demands upon the curriculum that cannot be fulfilled within the context of the current specialization. More importantly, students need and deserve a comprehensive professional program in order to compete in the marketplace. The BFA degree has long been recognized as the professional standard in this field. Students with less preparation are likely to find their opportunities severely limited. Thus, the College has proposed this BFA program to provide students with the expected, appropriate professional credentials for this field.

C. THE CITY COLLEGE - CENTER FOR ADVANCED ENGINEERING DESIGN AND DEVELOPMENT:

RESOLVED, That the Center for Advanced Engineering Design and Development be established at The City College in accordance with the Policy Guidelines on Research Centers and Institutes set forth by the Board of Trustees, February, 1995.

EXPLANATION: The purpose of the proposed Center is to conduct, coordinate, and promote interdisciplinary design-oriented, applied engineering research and development for industry. In addition, the Center will serve as an outreach and referral service for small to large industrial firms in New York City seeking assistance with technical problems. The Center will also encourage and foster interdisciplinary engineering design and manufacturing education among the academic departments in The City College School of Engineering.

The proposed Center is an outgrowth of collaborative design projects first implemented through the Mechanical Engineering Department's Senior Design Course involving undergraduate students working with faculty on industry sponsored work. It was then recognized that there was great potential for funding from industry for such applied projects as well as for traditional research projects. The need for advanced technologies with immediate impact is so profound that industries strive to broaden their technological base. This has resulted in calls for partnerships and cooperation between industries and universities that are encouraged by the federal government through special programs at major funding agencies and by the state government as well. Thus, the Center is designed to mobilize the substantial intellectual resources of the School of Engineering to respond to this need.

The Center's activities will be conducted in accordance with standard University policies and procedures, including but not limited to those regarding contracts, grants, custody, and reimbursement of funds.

NO. 6. COMMITTEE ON FACULTY, STAFF, AND ADMINISTRATION: RESOLVED, That the following items be approved:

A. KINGSBOROUGH COMMUNITY COLLEGE - NAMING OF THE PERFORMING ARTS CENTER, THE LEON M.
GOLSTEIN PERFORMING ARTS CENTER:

WHEREAS, Leon M. Goldstein dedicated 28 years of his professional career to serving the needs of the students, faculty, and staff of Kingsborough Community College; and

WHEREAS, He provided strong leadership and a passionate concern for the maintenance of excellence in education; and

WHEREAS, He demonstrated a strong commitment to the mission of the community college and dedicated himself to meeting the needs of all members of the community; and

WHEREAS, He demonstrated educational vision through his support of collaborative educational endeavors making the College a recognized leader in the field; and

WHEREAS, He demonstrated a life-long interest and support of the arts; and

WHEREAS, This interest has made the arts available to the entire College community; now therefore be it

RESOLVED, That in memory of President Goldstein, the Performing Arts Center at Kingsborough Community College be named the Leon M. Goldstein Performing Arts Center.

EXPLANATION: Leon M. Goldstein served as President of Kingsborough Community College for 28 years. His dedication to this institution is well known. His constant quest to maintain not only an educationally superior institution but to also create an environment conducive to education has produced a campus which is admired by all who see it. The arts on campus have always had a special meaning to President Goldstein. During his tenure at Kingsborough, he supported numerous performing arts programs including The Children's Theater series, which exposes public school and community children to live theater performances. This program serves 17,000 children each year. In addition, many musical concerts are held during the academic year drawing an audience from the College's students, faculty and staff, and the community. For the past 25 years, the College has also sponsored a summer concert series drawing thousands of community residents to each event. Since the inception of the Kingsborough High School for the Sciences, with President Goldstein's support, the Performing Arts Center has been the site for student musical and dramatic productions. In light of his ongoing interest and support of the performing arts on campus, it is only fitting that the Performing Arts Center be named the Leon M. Goldstein Performing Arts Center.

This proposal has received the overwhelming support of the College Council which includes faculty, staff, and students.

B. THE GRADUATE SCHOOL AND UNIVERSITY CENTER - NAMING OF THE MARTIN E. SEGAL THEATRE CENTER:

RESOLVED, That the Board of Trustees of The City University of New York approve the renaming of the Center for the Advanced Study of Theatre and the naming of the new theater center space as The Martin E. Segal Theatre Center, at The Graduate School and University Center's new campus at 365 Fifth Avenue, effective July 1, 1999.
EXPLANATION: Mr. Martin E. Segal is a trustee of The Graduate Center Foundation, Inc. He has been a leader in the arts in New York City for many years and has played a key role in the arts community as founder and chairman of the New York International Festival of the Arts, Chairman of Lincoln Center for the Performing Arts, founding member of American Public Radio, long-time trustee of the Institute for Advanced Study in Princeton, and first chairman of the Commission for Cultural Affairs of the City of New York.

The Martin E. Segal Theatre Center has been made possible by generous endowing contributions from Martin E. Segal, his family, and from his friends who have admired his extraordinary public service on behalf of the arts, and who endorse the aims of the Theatre Center at The Graduate School's new campus. Income from the endowment of $1 million will support a number of activities. A primary project of the Center will be to conduct comprehensive research on the economic impact of the arts and culture on New York City. Another initiative will be an ongoing series of meetings to address urgent questions relating to the future of the arts in the City. The Martin E. Segal Theatre Center will also be dedicated to nurturing artistic talent, by serving as a meeting place for playwrights and theatre professionals within The City University community, as well as from New York City and beyond. The Center will be a venue for readings of the works of established and new playwrights and will be the host site for other related events.

Report of Committee Chairman Murphy:

The Committee received the annual report on sexual harassment for 1997/98, which was provided pursuant to implementation procedures of the Board of Trustee's policy against sexual harassment. This report consists of a summary description of the sexual harassment educational activities undertaken by the colleges during 1997/98 as well as the number of sexual harassment complaints reported and the nature and outcome of these complaints. The colleges reported a total of 119 complaints and also reported a variety of educational activities including workshops, panel discussions, new employee orientation sessions and an interactive, computerized, sexual harassment training program which was customized for CUNY use. The Committee also expressed its desire to establish a climate of zero tolerance towards sexual harassment at the University and there was significant discussion among Committee members about the current reporting instrument.

Trustee Rios suggested the inclusion of additional reporting fields, such as the number of unresolved complaints that result in lawsuits, the amount of funds spent on training and prevention at the colleges, and the status of cases held over from prior years. The office of Faculty, Staff, and Administration was asked to modify the reporting instrument in accordance with our discussion and present the revised document to the Committee for review.

NO. 7. COMMITTEE ON FACILITIES, PLANNING, AND MANAGEMENT: RESOLVED, That the following items be approved:

A. NEW YORK CITY TECHNICAL COLLEGE - WINDOW REPLACEMENT AT NAMM HALL:

RESOLVED, That the Board of Trustees of The City University of New York authorize the Secretary of the Board to execute a contract with the firm of Goshow Architects for professional design and construction-related services as required for the Window Replacement at Namm Hall project at New York City Technical College, CUNY Project No. NY075-096. The contract cost of $122,262 shall be chargeable to the State Capital Construction Fund. The contract shall be subject to approval as to form by the University Office of the General Counsel.

EXPLANATION: The scope of this project is the evaluation of the condition of approximately 1,000 windows at Namm Hall which were installed in 1967, and the design, preparation of contract documents, and supervision of construction for the necessary replacement and/or repair of windows within the available construction funding.

The proposed firm was selected in accordance with law and the procedures established by the University.
B. BRONX COMMUNITY COLLEGE - GOULD MEMORIAL LIBRARY AUDITORIUM RENOVATION:

RESOLVED, That the Board of Trustees of The City University of New York amend the resolution adopted at the meeting of October 27, 1997 (Cal. No. 4.G.) to authorize the Secretary of the Board to execute the contract for construction of the Gould Memorial Library with N.K. Morgan Assoc., Inc. in the amount of $2,092,520, chargeable to Capital Project No. BX019-093.

EXPLANATION: The funding available for this project at the time of the previous submission was $1,450,000, the sum of several separate appropriations from the Bronx Borough President, the City Council and matching amounts from the State Capital Budget. The previous submission noted that the project scope of work had undergone successive reductions in order to fit within the available funding, resulting in a base bid package estimated at $1,475,310.

In addition, three small but significant scope of work items, had originally been designed as add alternates. These alternates were: 1. Condensing Units and Piping, or adding cooling capability for the auditorium, instead of only upgrading the existing heating and ventilation system, as shown on the basic design; 2. Refurbish Theater Seating, including 576 seats in the auditorium, instead of refurbishing only 72 seats for the balcony, as contemplated in the basic design; 3. New Vinyl Flooring at Orchestra, instead of only replacing the carpet in the orchestra level aisles, as called for in the base bid.

These add alternates would have been awarded as part of the project contract to the extent funding allowed. However, bids for the project including the base package as well as the alternates, proved to be considerably higher than the pre-bid estimates. The consultants attribute this to an extremely active construction market and to the fact that this project, with its restoration and rehabilitation components, requires particularly high levels of labor time and skill. After confirming the validity of the bids, rather than rebid a further reduced scope of work additional funding was identified from residual appropriations and by redesignating funds from other projects.

C. HUNTER COLLEGE - AMENDMENT TO ASSEMBLY HALL RENOVATIONS:

RESOLVED, That the Board of Trustees of The City University of New York amend the resolution adopted at the meeting of February 22, 1999 (Cal. No. 7.A.) for renovations to the Assembly Hall at Hunter College, to authorize a change in the source of funding for all contracts to be executed for this project. Instead of charging the total estimated amount of $1,279,000 to FAS Code 217703400, Project No. 9900-400-57 during the fiscal year ending June 30, 2000, this same total contract amount shall be chargeable to Capital Project No. HU002-099.

EXPLANATION: This work was determined to be capital eligible and the College has identified capital funds for this purpose.

A. THE CITY UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK - AMENDMENTS TO BOARD POLICY ON PAYMENT OF STIPENDS TO STUDENT LEADERS:

4. The Chancellor or his or her designee shall, every two years, review the schedule of stipend payments, and report to the Board on any adjustments he or she recommends as being appropriate, in relationship to any changes in the Consumer Price Index (CPI).

These amendments shall be effective July 1, 1999.

In accordance with the Board policy, the Chancellor has reviewed the schedule of stipend payments since stipends were last increased in July, 1996. The proposed revisions increase stipends by 5.0% in accordance with the 5.0% increase in the Consumer Price Index (CPI), for all urban consumers in New York City and Northeastern New Jersey, from July, 1996 through January, 1999.

NOTE: Matter underlined is new; matter in brackets is deleted.
